BEDS NEEDED FOR HOSPITAL

APPEAL FOR FUNDS FROM RED CROSS SOCIETY

Dear Mrs. English :-

The Canadian Red Cross Society has decided to equip a Convalescent Home for Canadians, at St. Lawrence College Ramsgate. For this purpose, some 700 beds at $50.00 each will be required, in addition to the 400 beds already subscribed but not used in previous hospitals equipped by the Society.

The Alberta Branch has undertaken to donate 100 of these beds, as its share of the equipment of this Home. Will your district help with this gift, and to what extent? We suggest that you make an appeal to the people for contributions to the fund. Many of our Alberta men will be admitted to and cared for in this Home and we suggest that you impress upon those who give to this fund, that they are, without doubt, providing for their own friends and relatives.

The cost of installing a bed is $50.00 and beds thus paid for will be named after the donor. Societies and individuals wishing to subscribe to this fund are requested to communicate with the Provincial Office as soon as possible, in order that there may be no unnecessary delay in completing arrangements.

Yours very truly,
M. Pinkham,
Hon'y Sec-Treas.

Mrs. S. English will accept any contributions to the Red Cross fund.

LADY URSULA'S HUSBAND

—BY— FLORENCE WARDEN

Word, Luck & Co., Limited

In the meantime Lady Ursula and Paul had come downstairs ready for their walk. In the hall they met Lord Eastling, whose expression changed when he saw that he was with his wife.

"I thought, Ursula, you were going out with me," said he coldly. But her sweet, pleading face made peace between them.

"I am going out with both of you," she said. Very reluctantly the two men accompanied her, while she exerted herself, by addressing first the one and then the other, to keep the peace between them and to make conversation in which both must join her.

She had set her heart on this opportunity of bringing the two men nearer together, on smoothing away difficulties and on effecting a real reconciliation between them, for which she believed that her talk with her brother that morning had prepared the way.

But the result was not very successful. They visited the village where Lady Ursula had made herself known and beloved, and where her two companions were amused at the welcome given her by the uncouth natives of the Black Country.

On the way, they passed a man who was evidently not a native of the place—a man who turned on his heel and disappeared, as it were, furtively at their approach. Lord Eastling looked at the disappearing figure with a strong impression that he had seen it before somewhere.

On their return homewards they saw it again. But this time he had a good look at the man and had no difficulty in remembering where he had seen the face before. It was that of the taller of the two men who had made him feel sure, by their behavior in the Strand restaurant, that they were friends, or perhaps accomplices, of Paul Payne.

The whole ugly story of the pearl necklace, and his doubts, flashed vividly back into his mind as Lord Eastling looked from Paul, walking on the other side of Lady Ursula, to this skulking figure in the overcoat and bowler hat.

What was the man doing there? Full of his doubts, his brother-in-law, which had before been assumed somewhat by his sister's earnest, trusting advocacy, Lord Eastling stopped and he watched the man as he slunk away once more.

"Who's that fellow?" he asked sharply, addressing Paul. "How on earth should I know?" replied his brother-in-law lazily. "Some loafer in want of a pal to treat him, I should imagine."

"Yes-looked," observed Lady Ursula, anxious to appease the antagonistic feeling which she perceived to be rising again in her companions, "as if he hoped to find a friend among us."

"That's what I thought," said Lord Eastling, drily. Lady Ursula looked at her brother with sudden fear.

"He has a most disagreeable countenance," said she. "He has a horrid look."

"Yes," said Lord Eastling, while Paul said nothing.

Lord Eastling remained silent for the rest of the walk, being deeply occupied in conjecture concerning the appearance of this man in the neighborhood. Instantly all his doubts arose afresh, and he set himself to keep watch once more upon the movements of his brother-in-law, determined to prevent a meeting between him and this man whom he believed to be his accomplice, and in whom he recognized the person who had visited Paul at the hotel.

Paul, however, never left the house for the rest of the day, except to go with his brother-in-law to the post office to buy some stamps and post some letters.

On the following morning, while Lady Ursula was having her hair dressed, there was a violent knocking at her door, and Mrs. Finchden came in, radiant and breathless with excitement. In the doorway stood her husband, laughing and apologetic.

"Oh, Lady Ursula," gasped the excited lady, as she rushed at her friend and threw herself on the floor beside her, "it's all right. I've got them back—my pearls! my pearls!" And she stammered out a confused account of the return of the three rows of pearls that morning, sent through the post in a shallow carton box, without a word of explanation. Lady Ursula looked at the box, at the pearls within it, and at the direction outside. This was in an old-fashioned female hand. The postmark was that of the nearest town. She rose to her feet, in great excitement, and turned to her husband as soon as Mrs. Finchden had left the room.

"Paul," said she, "it was that horrid-looking man we saw yesterday who stole them and who sent them back. Don't you remember? The man who looked at us so oddly; the man my brother spoke about?"

Paul shrugged his shoulders. "What should he have to do with it?" he asked in surprise.

But she warier still. "I am sure I'm right," said she. "Tom looked at him suspiciously, and so did I."

"But if it was the thief, why should he send the pearls back?" "I think," said Lady Ursula, "that he had heard of the stir about them, and that he was afraid."

"I shouldn't wonder," said Paul absently, as he read for the second time a letter which the post had just brought him. "So now you know. No more at present, from your friend, B. G." Paul read the letter a third time, including Brady Kane's initials at the end, and watched it burn.

CHAPTER XVII.

"Why, Paul, what's the matter?" There was a sudden note of keen anxiety in the voice of Lady Ursula as she put this question to her husband. He was standing by the fire, watching the last corner of the letter from Brady Kane as it turned black and floated up the chimney in the smoke.

He turned to her, and taking her by the elbow, he said to her, "Nothing, my dear. What should be the matter?"

"Who was that letter from?" "The one I've thrown into the fire? Well, it was a begging letter, that was all."

Her countenance grew clearer. "Ah, it's very dreadful to get those," she said with a little sigh. "One doesn't like to take no notice of them, for the story the writer tells may be true."

He shook his head. "It is never true, you know," he said.

"Paul," said she, as her face grew grave again, "how do you explain the return of the pearls?"

He shrugged his shoulders. "I scarcely know how to explain it, unless it really was a practical joke, as I put it to them yesterday."

But she shook her head. "I don't think it was that," she said. "I'm more inclined to think they were stolen by one of the servants in league with someone outside. Do you remember the man we saw yesterday, skulking about just outside the village, the man who seemed to be on the watch for someone?"

"My dear, you've suggested already that that poor wretch was concerned in this affair, but I can't see the faintest possibility of any connection. I should like you to tell me what put such a wild idea into your head."

Lady Ursula did not at once reply. It was quite true, as Paul knew, that she had "hit the right nail on the head," but was only by accident, and womanlike she would have been hard put to it to give reasons for her belief.

The instinct she had that it was the affair of the pearls which had brought this man to a place where he was evidently a stranger was, indeed, born of several trifling circumstances, each so apparently insignificant that it would have escaped notice by itself.

Thus, the man had looked hard at Paul, and Paul, on seeing him, had quickly averted his head; he had glanced out of the corners of his eyes at Lord Eastling, who had evidently been startled to see him there.

These trifles, amounting to nothing much in all yesterday, seemed to Lady Ursula to have assumed greater importance today. Yet still she would have found it hard to account for the connection she imagined between the appearance of the strange man and the restitution of the pearls.

No Astrological Hope for Kaiser

The remainder of the year holds out no hope of any revival of the German Emperor's fortunes. The planets are uniformly threatening. Saturn coming to the conjunction of the Dragon's Tail (the Moon's South node) close to his Ascendant in September, and the Sun arriving at the conjunction of Neptune in his horoscope by primary direction of a month or two later. The stationary position of Jupiter in Britain's ruling sign, Aries, in December next, in trine with its own place, in King George's horoscope, is encouraging as regards the prospect of complete victory and final peace as the year draws to a close.—Occult Review.

Rumania In History

Her Place in European History Has Always Been an Honorable One

Though Rumania does not appear to have played a conspicuous part in the advance of civilization, her place in European history is an honorable one, and, if less spectacular than those of her neighbors, her achievements have proved of supreme value. In their stubborn resistance to the Ottoman invaders, the Rumanians, in common with the other peoples inhabiting Oriental Europe, made possible that stability and security that enabled Western civilization to develop, and, although they came under the sway of the Turks, yet the Rumanians, by their determined stand, so weakened the power of the Moslem invaders, that they were unable to carry on the fight.

Rosovo is a name sacred to all the Balkan nations that resisted Turkish rule. It was in 1389 that Mircea the Old, Prince of Wallachia, led the united Balkan armies against the Turks. The battle was lost; the vanquished were placed under tribute, but their fight against their conquerors was carried on for centuries. Like a great breakwater, these little nations held the Ottoman waves in check, and left western Europe free to forge ahead untrammelled by the fear of Moslem incursions. Until 1877 the tribute imposed five centuries earlier, following the battle of Rosovo, was the basis of the relations between Rumania and Turkey. Unlike Hungary, which for over a century was a Turkish province, the Rumanian provinces never fell completely under the sway of the conqueror. Under the suzerainty of Turkey, however, Rumania became a mere pawn in the politics of the great European powers. She lost Bukovina to Austria in 1775, and Bessarabia to Russia in 1812. The jealousies of the European powers alone saved Rumania from greater territorial losses.

Under Prince Carol, who was related to the King of Prussia and to Napoleon III., Rumania maintained a bolder front against partition and won her independence. Bulgaria since then has done much to keep alive Rumanian suspicions. At the outset of the first Balkan campaign, 1910-11, Bulgarian official documents referred to the Dobrogea, which was Rumanian territory, as a "Bulgaria Irredenta." The double dealing of the Central Powers in the last Balkan war detached Rumania. Dreading the increasing influence of Germany in Bulgaria, Rumania turned to Russia.

The present war finds Rumania in a position favorable to the accomplishment of her most cherished dream—the inclusion under one flag of all Rumanians. Transylvania is the cradle of the Rumanian nation. In Bukovina and Bessarabia the peasants, not given to change, have preserved all the customs and characteristics of the Rumanian race, including the language. In Transylvania, despite Magyar oppression, the Rumanians form a strong middle class. Definitely detached from Germany, Rumania had not time to recover from her fears of Russian influence on the Bosphorus when the European war called for a decision as to her attitude. Moreover, the supply of all her war materials was in the hands of Krupp when the war broke out. A weak Cabinet and an opportunist Premier declared for neutrality.

While the Rumanians of Transylvania were forced to fight in the Hungarian regions against Russia, satcraft in Rumania turned to questions of trade. But the cry of Transylvania could not for ever go unheeded. With Bulgaria on the side of the Central Powers, the people of Rumania recalled the words of Prince Carol, addressed to Bismarck in 1880, "Rumania will only be menaced by a real danger when a Great Bulgaria comes into existence." It is "Rumania Irredenta" against "Bulgaria Irredenta."

Another Theory Shattered

A study of history will show that we may, with an easy conscience, dismiss the theory of Treitschke that war is a health-giving tonic which Providence must be expected constantly to offer to the human race for its own good. Apart altogether from the hopes we entertain for the victory in this war of a cause which we believe to be just, we may desire in the interests of all mankind that this issue should discredit by defeat a theory which is noxious as well as baseless. The future progress of mankind is to be sought, not through the strifes and hatreds of the nations, but rather by their friendly co-operation in the healing and enlightening works of peace, and in the growth of a spirit of friendship and mutual confidence which removes the causes of war.—The Atlantic Monthly.

HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too long to continue. How she regained health.

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever I did and am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."—Mrs. JAMES CONLEY, 516 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicine ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it will be confidential.

A PROMINENT NURSE SPEAKS.

Many Nurses in Canada and Elsewhere Say the Same.

Chatham, Ont.—"Being a nurse I have had occasion to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription quite a lot. I always recommend it to my patients and it has been a wonderful help to many of them. I never knew of a case where it failed. I have a patient who is using it now and she is doing fine since taking it. I have taken it myself and got the very best results. I consider it the best medicine there is today for women who are ailing."

—Miss Enru Moore, 30 Dege St., Chatham, Ont.

THAT WEAK BACK Accompanied by pain here and there—extreme nervousness—sleeplessness—may be faint spells, chills or spasms—all are signals of distress for a woman. She may be growing from girlhood into womanhood—or later suffering during middle life, which leaves so many wrecks of women. At any or all of these periods of a woman's life she should take a tonic and nerve prescriber for just such cases by a physician of vast experience in the diseases from which women suffer.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has successfully treated more cases in the past 50 years than any other known remedy. It can now be had in sugar-coated tablet form as well as in the liquid. A New Yorker writes that he thoroughly understands the situation in Greece. In that case he should go to Athens at once and explain it to the Greeks.

Arrangements have been made whereby teachers holding Grade XI certificates may obtain a Grade XII or First Class Certificate while still remaining in charge of their schools. It has been the policy of the Department of Education to encourage teachers to equip themselves for public service to the highest point of efficiency.

Many school boards have placed themselves on record as favoring the engagement of holders of First Class Certificates only. For higher academic qualifications evening classes special courses and summer sessions have been of great value.

The Provincial Institute of Technology and Arts now offers extra-mural courses in any or all of the subjects required for the Grade XII examination.

Instruction and guidance will be rendered by the members of the staff, who are highly qualified specialists in the various departments. The system of tuition and instruction, and the confidential report of the staff will be recognized by the Department of Education.

Classes by correspondence in the various subjects will be started not later than October 1st. Already many inquiries have been received as to the scope of the courses offered, so that the enrolment of students will be large.

Further announcements as to the details of the courses will be made to the various schools and officials in the Province.

Applications should be forwarded to G. R. Dolan, M. A. Provincial Institute of Technology and Art, Calgary, as soon as possible.

The fact that one of the biggest milling concerns in this country has just declared a 12% dividend possibly indicates another reason why the price of flour has risen.

New Zealand has now sent 60,000 men to the front out of a total white population of 1,000,000. It is now providing 2,400 men each month to maintain its army at the front. The total amount raised for war expenditures now exceeds $55,000,000 and more than $15,000,000 of this amount will be met by this year's surplus revenue. Proportionately to population it will be seen that New Zealand has apparently done better than Canada in its contribution both of men and money, to the empire's war forces in the great world-wide struggle now being waged on the bloody battle line of Europe.

Von Hindenburg still speaks of the German "will to do," but he has made a notable admission to a newspaper correspondent. He says that "where there's a will there's a way, and when we have found that way we shall draw the consequences, and unhesitatingly." From this it is gathered that Germany has the will, but has lost the way.

She wills as strongly as ever to destroy Britain and to gain world power. She wills with all former eagerness the subservience of every nation to her sway. She wills with all her intensity of spirit a "place in the sun" bigger than the place of any other nation or empire. But the way—ah, there's the rub.

The Birth of a Nation

A Thrilling Drama Shown in Motion Pictures

The unequalled success attending the production of D. W. Griffith's famous "Birth of a Nation" last season decided L. P. Walker, of Winnipeg, to again secure the attraction for his western towns, and the mightiest spectacle, the eighth wonder of the world, will make its reappearance at the Walker, Winnipeg, for three days with daily matinees, commencing Thursday, September 28.

This will be the third visit (the picture having already been presented four weeks in Winnipeg), and there is little doubt capacity houses will again be the order. After playing the Manitoba capital, the company goes to the Orpheum Theatre, Brandon, for the entire week commencing Monday, October 2nd, where two performances daily will be offered. Regina is the next city to be played, where two shows daily, commencing Thanksgiving Day, Monday, October 9, will be presented.

For three days, commencing Thursday, October 19th, the Empire Theatre, Saskatoon, will be played, and from there the organization travels West towards Vancouver.

Arrangements are being made to run special trains from the small towns and villages into Winnipeg, Brandon, Regina and Saskatoon, and there is little doubt that many will avail themselves of the opportunity to see the greatest photoplay the world has ever seen or is likely to see for many a day.

"The Birth of a Nation" as presented in the above towns will be precisely the same as the one now playing the Massey Hall, Toronto, for the fifth week, and comprises not only 12,000 feet of film, but carries a sixty-foot car of scenic, sound and music, and last, but by no means least, must be mentioned the excellent symphony orchestra of no less than twenty-five carefully selected musicians.

The Non-Cathartic Nature-cure for Constipation

Helps the System to Cure Itself.

You cannot cure constipation by violent methods. Violence is never effective against nature. That is why the use of purgative salts and purgative pills so easily become a habit. These things do not cure the trouble; they only force matters, and in so doing weaken the bowels till natural action becomes impossible, and you have to go on taking your pills or salts indefinitely. Compare Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief. This great tonic laxative helps nature by strengthening the bowels, natural action is restored and a cure effected which is real and lasting.

Dr. CHAS. F. FORSHAW, D.Sc., F.R.M.S., a well-known British Scientist, writes:—"Never take Salines or Purgatives for Constipation to force Bowel action is to aggravate the trouble and create the Constipation habit. I recommend as a superior and convenient treatment Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief."

Take Dr. Cassell's Instant Relief for constipation, biliousness, torpid liver, sick headache, dizziness, eye troubles, neuralgia, and wind, spasms, acidity, heartburn, impure blood, and that dull, heavy feeling which is a sure indication of liver troubles.

Women As Inventors

Many Notable Inventions Are the Result of Ingenuity of Women

Women are generally considered lacking in inventive ability. The truth is that they have been taking out patents steadily since 1790. It must be confessed that these ideas have not always turned out a complete success, but, then, the world has progressed as a result of many mistakes other than those of inventors. How few women ever realize as they ply their crochet needle that it was a Scotch woman, Christian Shaw, the daughter of the Laird of Balgarran, in Renfrewshire, who was the first to produce linen thread, as far back as 1729; her idea was developed later by the big Paisley firms of Clark and Coats.

Silk weaving was invented by the wife of the fourth Emperor of China, in the dim ages of antiquity; a woman in the harem of an Indian prince invented the weaving of cashmere shawls; the same clever woman or her mother (authorities differ on the point) discovered attire of roses; while a poor Italian woman rediscovered the secret of Venetian point lace, which had been lost for nearly 600 years. Madame Curie's triumph as the discoverer of radium is still fresh in the public mind, as is that of Dr. Maria Montessori, whose novel methods are likely to revolutionize the art of teaching in the near future.

Brief Report

Pat Garvey, section foreman at Trunkville, was formerly in the habit of sending long and detailed reports to the supervisor. Sometimes his daily report would contain three or four pages. The supervisor became weary of wading through a mass of detail, and ordered Garvey to "boil" his reports down. "You aren't writing love letters," was the supervisor's rebuke, "but railroad reports." Soon after this the river raised, and Garvey, the memorable cloudburst and flood occurred at Trunkville. This is the laconic report that Garvey made to the supervisor.

Raincoats Made of Paper

Inexpensive emergency raincoats which can be folded up and carried in a pocket or handbag are being made to fill the need so sorely felt when one is caught in a storm without any form of waterproof protection. These garments are made in sizes suitable for men, women and children, and come in two grades. The cheaper article is made of tough paper only, coated on one side, and is designed to be used but once; the other is reinforced with cloth mesh, and with proper care can be worn several times.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

To Continue Exploration

Stefansson Plans to Discover Extent of the New Northland

A letter has been received by G. J. Desbarats, deputy minister of naval service, from Dr. Anderson, of the Stefansson northern exploration party, who some time reached Nome. The letter gives additional details of the work done by the party and supplies some information as to Stefansson's future movements.

The letter states that Stefansson's plan had been to make a northerly circuit around the new land, which he discovered a year ago, with the object of discovering its extent and whether any territory existed north of there.

As a result of the fact that his ships did not succeed in getting far north in 1915, however, and of trouble with his dogs, the explorer was unable to carry out his design. He had reached his new land last May, but it is understood that he will winter at Winter Harbor, on Melville Island. The schooner Polar Bear, one of the vessels of the expedition, was expected to reach this port this summer and form a winter base there.

Kent Chipman, one of the members of the southern party who travelled to Edmonton by the overland route, instead of going to Nome with the rest of his companions, has reached Ottawa and is preparing his report to the Geological Survey Department. Mr. Chipman, who was topographer with the expedition, travelled south by way of the Mackenzie and Athabasca rivers.

Taxation Of Land Values

The day has long since passed when the doctrines of Henry George could be ridiculed or scouted as unworthy of serious attention. They have found much acceptance in Europe, and particularly in Great Britain, where there is now a widespread feeling in favor of the taxation of unearned increment—a feeling which crystallized into legislation some years ago when Mr. Lloyd George was Chancellor of the Exchequer. In Australasia, in the Canadian West, and elsewhere, the principle of differentiation between taxation of land-values and taxation of improvements continually gains ground. "Progress and Poverty" blazed the way for what has now become a large and important school of thought in legitimate political economy.—Hamilton Spectator.

STEW!

If you 'ave lost your 'aversack, your kitbag or your pipe,
Your 'ousewife, soap or oily rag with which you clean your 'ipe,
Your belt or second pair o' socks, your layard or pull-through,
Oh, do not be dispirited; you'll get 'em in the stew!

If from the transport lines you miss a face, you used to know,
With stick-up ears an' yellow teeth all in a samin' row,
'E's not gone for evermore, though seemin' lost to view,
The late lamented army mule: you'll meet 'im in the stew!

As we go through the countryside, route-marchin' in the sun,
With bandy-rolls an' co-oler-on, which weighs about a ton,
Oh, this is what the people shout as we go marchin' through:
"Ere come the Loyal whaddy-calls— I'm sure I smelt the stew!"

We get it 'ot, we get it cold, we get it in between,
We get it thin, we get it thick, we get it fat an' lean,
We get it for our "day-joo-nay," our tea an' luncheon too,
An' when the long day's march is done we top it off with stew.

When we are bound for foreign shores an' 'arf across the water
The transport starts a-rollin' like a transport hadn't oughter,
To cheer our faintin' spirits up when we are feelin' blue,
They'll get the dixies goin' an' they'll serve us out some stew.

So when the wicked war is done an' peace is 'ere again,
We won't forget the chaps as toiled to please our muer men;
We'll call to mind the favorite dish we found on our menu,
And think of our battalion cooks—an' drink their 'ealths—in stews!

TRAINING AND AG PARTNER WILL MAKE STRONG COMBINATION

WIFE HELPS THE SOLDIER-FARMER TO SUCCEED
The Government is Making a Special Monetary Allowance in Addition to the Pension, for the Maintenance of Both the Soldier and his Family, While he is Receiving Elementary Training

"What makes you think you will succeed as a farmer?"
The question was asked of a returned soldier who had expressed a very strong desire to get on the land.
"My wife," he answered.
"Do you mean to say she persuaded you?"

"No, I didn't need any persuading. But she wants to go as much as I do."

"Does she understand what it means?"
"She ought. She was born and brought up on a farm; she is not afraid of hard work; and she prefers to live in the country anyway."

"For the children's sake?"

"We've got none, worse luck. No, she likes it better herself."

That man's battle is half won. He was not a farm boy himself, and he does not imagine that a little experience he possesses is enough. He is therefore taking advantage of the elementary training, in such matters as gardening and poultry raising, already started by the Military Hospitals Commission at some of its Convalescent Hospitals; and he aims at taking a course of extra instruction later on at one of the agricultural schools.

As announced some time ago, the Government makes special monetary allowances, in addition to the pension, for the maintenance of both the soldier and his family while he is being trained, if he has to learn a new occupation; so no man should have the slightest hesitation about taking full advantage of the training put at his disposal to increase his capacity and better his position.

A trained man, and a wife both experienced and willing, make a team hard to beat.

It is very interesting to see that this fact has been recognized in a most practical way in England. There the Government decided, a few months ago, to start, by way of experiment, three pioneer land colonies of ex-soldiers—or rather "ex-service men," for even the man now ploughing the sea will have his chance of ploughing the land.

The President of the Board of Agriculture has just announced that in selecting settlers for these colonies "preference will be given to men of equal merit and qualifications, to those whose wives or sisters or daughters have acquired proficiency in milking or other useful occupations, as the result of their employment on the land either before or during the war."

As a matter of fact, women in the Old Country have taken a large and even extraordinary share in working the farms, which the war has deprived of so many of their usual laborers. Women of every social rank have volunteered to do this, and have kept their pledge, though many of them were not only quite unaccustomed to manual labor, but had no necessity to work at all.

Canadian women, the vast majority of them, have never been in that position. Work is a new and unfamiliar thing to them, and a very large number even of the town-dwellers among them were brought up on farms. Many of our returned soldiers, therefore, who think of going "back to the land" will have a great advantage in the experience of their wives as well as in the special training offered them.

Special training is given, of course, for a variety of other industries. The greatest care is taken to choose the occupation best suited to each man's ability. But, unquestionably, agriculture is the great national industry and needs the energies of every man qualified to undertake it.

To Advertise Butter

The National Dairy Council, according to reports sent out by the secretary, is planning to follow the example of the orange and raisin growers, and put on an advertising campaign to cover three years, spending at the rate of $200,000 a month. This money will be used in advertising the value and the healthfulness of milk, butter, cheese and ice cream. The advertisements will be carried in the leading magazines and daily papers. It is an ambitious programme, but not at all impracticable if the dairy interests are willing to pay the bills. If the advertising is well done, it will be profitable to the dairymen of the country. It will increase the consumption of dairy products permanently; and if the supply can be increased to take care of the demand without too much of an advance in price, the result will be satisfactory.—Wallace's Farmer.

A Simple Declaration

"What are your views on the tariff?"

"I'm for protection of everything that my constituents manufacture for sale," replied Senator Sargisson. "And I favor free trade for everything that they are compelled to buy for cash."

—Washington Star.

Small Grain Exhibits

The Influence for Better Crops Resulting from Fair Activities

The use of better seed offers one of the most effective methods for increasing the yield of farm crops. The work of seed improvement associations and individuals who carefully select their own seed, has resulted in the general use of better seed. Competition in producing and displaying crop products of high quality at agricultural fairs is another influence which should have an increasing benefit on the quality of seed planted.

The influence for better crops resulting from fair activities would be greater if more persons exhibited their products and if greater care would be taken in the selection and preparation of exhibits.

A creditable exhibit of field crops should contain products which are typical of the district they represent. The crops comprising an exhibit should be harvested when in prime condition and should be of superior quality and well prepared to be properly and tastefully arranged when placed on exhibit.

Professor H. G. Schaffer, of the Washington Experiment Station, at Pullman, gives the following directions for the preparation of seed and wheat exhibits.

Seed grain, wheat, oats and barley. Grain prepared for exhibit should be true to variety name. It should be harvested when it is mature but not over ripe. It should be threshed as early as possible after harvest. Rain and other conditions of weather may cause discoloration. Usually grain should be recleaned in order that all chaff and foreign matter may be removed. It should also be graded to remove very large and undersized kernels. Unless the rules of the fair specify otherwise, the exhibit should consist of one peck.

Sheaf grain, wheat, oats and barley should be harvested for sheaf exhibits in the same manner as for culture and before it is thoroughly dry. Better exhibits will result if the grain is pulled and suspended by the roots under a cover, thus preventing the exhibits from being cut off and only those stalks which have full length of straw and well developed heads are used. The grain should be bound in sheaves about four inches in diameter and tied in two places. A tape should be used to bind the sheaves as it is less likely to break or break the straw than string. Black or white tape is to be preferred and figure ribbons should be used in tying the sheaves. If the leaves are removed from the stems the exhibit will have a neater appearance.

Boys In The War

Persistent Italian Boy Who Became a Real Corporal

The Italian army has the distinction of being the only army engaged in the war that has a corporal in its ranks who is almost a baby in age.

Margutti, a boy of 13 years old and lived at Gaglianico, became a full-fledged soldier, and through his acquaintance with two army clergies became familiar with the fighting forces of his country.

One day he rode out to the trenches on the army trucks after some argument, and was affectionately received by the soldiers who promoted him to corporal on the spot.

Proud of his newly gained distinction, Margutti soon secured a uniform and served his country with distinction. He spent some time in the trenches and took active part in the fighting, proving himself remarkably courageous in the onslaughts of the Austrian hordes.

The captain of Margutti's division came along to inspect the troops one morning and was impressed by the business-looking lad who stood erect, on guard, his rifle at his shoulder. Upon being asked what he was doing, the boy answered in an fighting, sir.

"What class do you belong to?" inquired the captain. "Third elementary class, sir," came the reply. "But I have been promoted corporal."

The officer could not refrain from laughing at this answer and took the brave youngster in his arms, kissing him affectionately. The child was sent back home, but he did not remain there long as the officer had promised to use his influence to get him back in the trenches, and he did. Margutti is now fighting with the regular army, and is a real corporal.

Had it not been for the war, the impregnable wall of triple steel would have been over before this. Germany would have triumphed; but, in the terms of peace would have been signed.

We and the dominions, and indeed, our allies and the neutral world, owe much to British seapower. Whatever may be Germany's naval policy now, it is the dominions, and indeed, our allies and the neutral world, owe much to British seapower.

Domestic Gas From Straw

Simple Plant to Use Up the Straw

Pile and Supply Fuel and Light

The day of applying a match to the straw stack after threshing is over and thereby burning up a whole year's fuel is now passed, and from now on the farmer is likely to pay as much attention to the safeguarding of his straw as he does to his cattle and crops.

From the straw stack, which has hitherto gone up in smoke, gas can now be extracted, and by such a simple process that every farmer can cook, heat his house, light his residence and run his engines from his own little gas plant right at his very back door, using the much-despised straw pile as a means to this end.

The Dominion By-Product and Research Society, of Moose Jaw, of which George Harrison, M.P., general manager of the Saskatchewan Bridge and Iron Works, is the leading spirit, has discovered and perfected a small gas works which will in the near future be installed on practically every quarter section throughout the country.

George Harrison, the patentee, has obtained patent rights in Canada, the United States, Russia and the Argentine Republic. In an interview he said that no farmer will be without his own gas plant in the near future.

The exceedingly simple way in which the gas is produced guarantees the truth of the statement. One bale of straw, wheat, oats, barley or flax, is put into a cast-iron retort. The head is screwed tightly down and a small portion of straw is ignited in the firebox underneath. This produces the gas, which in turn passes out of the retort through another small cylinder of water in which it is washed and from there finds its way into the gasometer. This one bale of straw will produce enough high grade gas to do the cooking, heating and lighting of a seven-roomed house, and it is a safe conclusion that from now on, instead of burning his straw stack, the farmer will, through the efforts of the Research Society, conserve his straw and make his gas.

Mr. Harrison and his associates have had Dr. Andrews, of the well-known firm of Andrews and Cruickshanks, analytical chemists, employed for a long time and all the problems in connection with the small gas works and gases extracted from the straw have been scientifically worked out by them in their laboratory at Government Building, Regina, and for some time past a miniature gas retort has been burning and most astonishing results have been obtained.

According to the report of Dr. Andrews, five ounces of straw has produced sufficient gas to enable a 40-candle power mantle to burn six hours with a very white and highly illuminating flame.

The gases extracted from the straw cannot only be used for heating, lighting and cooking, but can also be utilized for driving gas engines and all other farm machinery, and with the high soaring price for kerosene and fuel oil, the discovery should be of vast interest to every farmer throughout the Dominion of Canada.—Moose Jaw Times.

Salt For Live Stock

Feeding Too Freely Is Injurious to Animals

Samples of salt are occasionally sent to experimental stations by farmers for analysis, with the statement that the animals, usually cattle or sheep, were poisoned after eating it in considerable quantities. In no case has any foreign substance that would account for the poisoning been found.

Since salt is necessary to life and is in universal use, it is difficult to understand that so large amounts of it are poisonous. Many cases of poisoning in chickens have been reported, and occasionally in larger animals. In one instance salt was by mistake used instead of sugar in a cake.

The cake was given to the chickens and killed all of them. Chickens are very susceptible to salt poisoning and while the amount that it takes to kill a horse or cow is considerable, this sometimes occurs when these animals are especially salt hungry.

When animals have not had access to salt for a long time, it is safer to give it to them sparingly at first.

$2,708.56 for a Car of Wheat

Railway companies of recent years have increased the capacity of grain cars considerably. This along with high prices that have prevailed at times since the outbreak of the European war has made it possible to net large sums on individual car shipments.

A very few years ago a remittance of $1,000 would look big to any shipper. This year checks of over twice that amount are being received in common. However, the highest return on a single car yet recorded was made by the Grain Growers' Grain Co., Ltd., of Winnipeg, when a car from Frasers, Alta., carrying 1,920 bushels 10 lbs. graded No. 1 Northern, with no dockage, netted $2,708.56.

There is little doubt but that this is the largest sum ever has been received in the history of the Canadian West for any single shipment sold through the regular market channels.
